What You Can Do to Help a Teen

- ◆ Let teens know that they can be tested and treated for STDs without parental consent. And it is so easy.
- ◆ Learn about signs, symptoms prevention and resources including testing sites so you can help with the factual information. You may be the only one they will talk to. If you can't, refer them to someone who can.
- ◆ Make sexual health part of your overall health and “Make Health Happen!”
- ◆ Get teens to practice negotiating skills and prompt them to support each other in making safer choices.
- ◆ Promote personal responsibility by encouraging teens to disclose their STD to a partner. The Health Department can help let a partner know about a possible exposure without giving the teens name or any information about them. Have discussions about safe and healthy relationships (examples: sexting, date rape, teen pregnancy, substance use).
